Appetite teasers, everywhere. The bakery where you know full well that some bakers carry a bigger line of bread, cakes, pies, cookies, doughnuts and bakery goods than others and it is common sense the one that has the trade carries the goods. We have both. Our shelves are always well stocked with first class goods. We employ only expert bakers and our delivery service is matchless.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR OUTLINES A RADICAL POLICY

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—With bold strokes Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, today outlined, in his annual report to the president, a broad policy in the conservation of the vast natural resources of the United States.

Two notable and interesting predictions are indicated rather than made in the report. One is that the time is not far distant when coal of too low a grade "to stand storage or transportation will be converted into electricity at the mouth of the mines and widely distributed for lighting, heat and power"; the other, that the gigantic force now wasting itself in the rivers of the country will be so controlled by dams as to provide heat, light and power to the people and that "within a generation I believe the people will be as alive to the value of public ownership of hydro-electric power plants as they are today to municipally-owned waterworks."

CALL OF THE WEST.

In the opening lines of the report Secretary Lane takes up a serious situation which obtains in a great section of the country. "There exists a feeling in the west," says he, "that its affairs and needs have not been given that consideration at the hands of the national government which they merit. This feeling is not confined to speculators or exploiters. It is the sentiment of many who are without selfish motive and regard the matter wholly from the standpoint of national growth."

NO ADEQUATE MACHINERY.

"There is one very simple explanation for the existence of this feeling. We have adventured upon a new policy of administering our affairs and have not developed adequate machinery. We have called a halt on methods of spoliation which existed, to the great benefit of many, but we have failed to substitute methods sane, healthful and progressive, by which the normal enterprise of an ambitious people can make full use of their own resources. We abruptly closed opportunities to the monopolist, but did not open them to the developer."

"The land policy put into force," he says, "caused dismay and discontent." The congress had been most generous in its disposition of the public lands. They were given to the railroads and to the states. To classify them was too difficult a task. "They would classify themselves when they arrived in individual ownership. And so the door was opened for monopoly and for fraud."

"If the government did not appreciate the invaluable nature of its assets there were men who did. The nation wanted homesteads, but found its lands drifting into the hands of corporations, which were withdrawing them from the market. A reaction was inevitable. If lands were to be withdrawn from public service, why might not the government do the withdrawing itself?"

A new policy was evolved, the secretary pointed out—that of using the land for the purpose to which it is best fitted. "To this policy," he says, "I believe the west is now reconciled. The west no longer urges a return to the hazards of the land is land policy. But it does ask action. Already the congress has recognized the appropriateness of this policy, but it is for yourself and congress further to extend this thought into our legislation.

CLIMATE OF ALASKA.

"Alaska can be made self-sustaining agriculturally. This vast and unsurpassed asset lies almost undeveloped. A territory one-fifth the size of the United States contains less than a thousand miles of anything that can be called a wagonroad."

This "unfortunate condition," in Secretary Lane's judgment, is not due to "the inhospitality of the Alaska climate," because "some of southeastern Alaska has a climate more temperate and more equable than that of the city of Washington, while much of the greater portion of the north has a kinder climate than Stockholm or St. Petersburg. There is more railroad building 500 miles north of the Canadian border than there is for the same distance south of it."

"Why has not this land been developed? The frank answer is that we did not realize until within a few years that it was worth developing. As soon as we discovered its value as a national asset we became alarmed and drew back, affrighted at the thought that we might lose it, or at least that it would be exploited by those who would exploit it without respect to the public interest."

NEW FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

"In my judgment the way to deal with the problem of Alaskan resources is to establish a board of directors to have this work in charge. Into the hands of this board or commission I would give all the national assets in that territory, to be used primarily for her improvement—her lands, fisheries, Indians, Eskimos, seals, forests, mines, waterways, railroads—all that the nation owns, cares for, controls or regulates."

Secretary Lane expresses the opinion that privately owned railroads would not be constructed in Alaska for many years, except as adjuncts to private enterprises. He regards it wise, therefore, for the government to undertake their building.
